USG passes motions for MAP grant

Senate approves OrgSync

EEERIN9@SIU.EDU

Undergraduate Student Government moved forward with its resolution to urge the restoration of the MAP grant and its proposed OrgSync program Wednesday.

Senator Dave Loftus wrote a formal request to give to the Legislature, asking it to restore the MAP funds. The request will be brought to lobby day at Springfield on Oct. 15. The senate unanimously passed the motion.

Nate Brown, student trustee, said the government and the university's students should be on the forefront of getting the grant money back.

"SIU is one of the most affected universities in the state," Brown said. "If we lose this MAP grant, students will be left behind."

More than 5,000 students receive the grant, which lost its funding for the spring semester throughout Illinois universities.

Brown and Loftus said they are both asking students to go to Springfield on lobby day so they can voice their opinions and personal experiences about the MAP grant, whether they receive it or not.

More than 400 students have already signed a petition to get the grant back, Brown said.

"We need to turn that potential energy into bodies on a bus going to Springfield," he said. "We can't continue to hemorrhage students."

Ashley Epps, vice president, said USG and students must work collectively if they want the grant funding back.

"We need help with the MAP grant, we need the money back, and we need to get the word out about it," Epps said.

Senators from USG will start a postcard campaign early next month to get the word out, Epps said. Fliers and T-shirts will also be handed out to students.

The government also voted to pass the $6,250 funding towards the OrgSync program.

OrgSync will allow all students to follow and join Registered Student Organizations. RSOs could also use it to track its members, promote events and host homepages all under one program. It also links up with Facebook and the new university-wide Banner system, said USG President Priciliano Fabian.

"It's going to be really good for campus," Fabian said. "It's going to connect people together."

SIUC begins dual enrollment with Shawnee

Collaboration between colleges aims to improve Cairo community

Genna Ord
DAILY EGYPTIAN
GORD@SIU.EDU

Southern Illinois University Carbondale and Shawnee Community College have initiated a dual enrollment process administrators said would benefit the region.

The partnership between SCC and SIUC's Department of Aviation Technologies is the first of its kind for the university and was created in part to spur economic development in and around Cairo, said Mike Burgener, department chair for aviation technologies.

He said the partnership allows students to begin at SCC to work toward an associate degree in aviation science and finish at SIUC with a bachelor's in aviation technologies.

While this is similar to a traditional two-plus-two program where students transfer from a community college to a four-year university, Burgener said the difference is students will be simultaneously enrolled, taking aviation technology courses through SIUC while doing general studies at Shawnee.

Burgener said Larry Peterson, president of SCC and the driving force behind the program, wanted to find a way to stimulate economic development in Cairo. He said SCC is seeking funding to build a new aviation maintenance training facility at the Cairo Municipal Airport, which will provide jobs for the region during the planning and construction stage.

Once the facility is built, he said, classes would begin in Cairo.

Jean Boyd, dean of instructional services at SCC, said the SCC students meet Wednesday at Shawnee's Extension Center in Anna to take aviation technologies classes taught by SIUC instructors. On Fridays, the students take a bus to the Southern Illinois Airport near Carbondale for the lab portion of their classes, she said.

Boyd said the program is the first partnership of its kind between SCC and SIUC. However, she said animal science and teacher education dual enrollment programs were also being considered. The school would be open to any ideas of partnering with SIUC, she said.

Boyd said seven students are enrolled in the aviation program, and the school is beginning to recruit students for the spring semester. Now that the program is in place, she said, students are more willing to participate.

State budget cuts hurt clinics

Nick Johnson
DAILY EGYPTIAN
NICKJ39@SIU.EDU

Low-cost health care clinics in Carbondale are suffering from insufficient funding and the state government's inability to reimburse Medicaid costs, said Fred Bernstein, CEO of Community Health Emergency Services, Inc (CHESI).

Bernstein's clinics offer a wide array of low-cost health care services — from pediatrics to endocrinology — operate in seven counties across southern Illinois and are approved by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Health Care Organizations.

He said roughly 62 percent of people who use CHESI clinics cannot afford private physicians or hospital bills and depend on Medicaid, but the state is more than six months behind on Medicaid payments.

"When you're earning the money you need, and the state is ... not paying on anything remotely resembling a timely basis, that severely restricts our cash flow," Bernstein said. "It makes it very difficult for us to keep operating."

However, Southern Illinois Healthcare, the large hospital parent company based in Carbondale, isn't feeling the budget strain from Medicaid it felt five months ago, said Rosslind Rice, spokeswoman for SIH.

"We're very pleased," Rice said. "The state has made significant progress, and it's really a non-issue for us at this time."

Although his clinics have received federal stimulus package money, Bernstein said the grants that primarily support them are underfunded.

"We continually have to deal with the fact that, although funding has improved for us over the years, it's still inadequate," he said.

Another 18 to 20 percent of CHESI clients, especially those in Carbondale, depend on a sliding fee scale payment option — an option where a patient's fee is discounted up to 60 percent based on their income level, Bernstein said.

Bernstein also said his clinics are under-used because not enough people know about them.

Ex-Blagojevich aide announces Senate run

CHICAGO — Chicago Urban League president Cheryl Jackson launched a campaign Wednesday that could make her the only black member of the U.S. Senate if she manages to overcome concerns about her former boss, disgraced ex-Gov. Rod Blagojevich. Announcing her candidacy at a soul food restaurant on Chicago's South Side, Jackson showed she will court black voters aggressively in a Democratic primary race that pits her against three white candidates. Incumbent Sen. Roland Burris isn't seeking a full term after having been appointed by Blagojevich to replace President Barack Obama in the Senate. Burris is currently the only black member of the Senate. Jackson dismissed questions about what role race would play in the Senate contest and about her past connections to Blagojevich, who was removed from office by lawmakers in January after he was arrested on federal corruption charges. The former governor has pleaded innocent to charges that he tried to sell or trade Obama's Senate seat. Jackson was Blagojevich's communications director and eventually his deputy chief of staff during most of his first term, a period of frequent questions about his ethics and the disclosure that he was under federal investigation. She left the administration shortly before Blagojevich ran for re-election in 2006. “I have long since — maybe about four years ago — turned the page on that,” she said. Since leaving the administration, Jackson said she has taken strong stands against her old boss, including opposing a business tax increase Blagojevich wanted and pushing a lawsuit that accuses the state of unfair school funding. Jackson said race was not her focus even as she seeks a Senate seat with special significance. It has been held by three of the nation's four black senators in modern times. She's not the only black candidate hoping to reach the Senate. The Republican primary in Illinois includes two black men, and a Republican in Colorado and a Democrat in Florida are running, too. Jackson insisted her candidacy isn't about race but about helping with such issues as economic development for small businesses, something she has focused on at the Chicago Urban League.

“I'm focused on running this race to solve people's problems,” she said. Jackson has taken an unpaid leave of absence from the civil rights group she has headed since 2006. Jackson will be part of a February Democratic primary in Illinois that includes first-term Illinois Treasurer Alexi Giannoulias, former Chicago Inspector General David Hoffman and Chicago attorney Jacob Meister. Meister said Blagojevich is a problem for Jackson. “She comes from the inner sanctum of the Blagojevich administration,” he said. Jackson has previously defended her old boss, saying in 2005 that criticism of him was “completely unfounded,” and that his record was “clear and strong” even as he was accused of not living up to the reform promises he made when he was elected in 2002. Giannoulias and Hoffman declined to comment. The Republican primary race for Obama's old Senate seat is more crowded, although the national GOP has coalesced around Rep. Mark Kirk, a congressman from Chicago's northern suburbs. Kent Redfield, professor emeritus of political science at the University of Illinois at Springfield, said it makes sense for Jackson to appeal to a base of black voters in Cook County. That's where many of the votes will come from in the primary, he said.

Residents urged to warm up to LIHEAP

Nick Johnson
DAILY EGYPTIAN
NICKJ39@SIU.EDU

Eligible Carbondale residents are encouraged to sign up for the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program for help with their heating bills this fall and winter, Mayor Brad Cole said.

Individuals and families in Carbondale account for about 25 percent of the $2 million LIHEAP federal grant money for Monroe, Jackson, Perry and Randolph counties, said Debbie Thies, LIHEAP program coordinator for the Western Egyptian Community Assistance Council.

WECAC accepts applications and administers the grant money, which is given on a first-come, first-serve basis, she said.

Thies said a diverse city such as Carbondale has a lot of need.

“There’s a lot of people using a lot of electricity and a lot of people who come from places where heat and electricity is a luxury,” she said.

The program, in operation since 1982, also assists people with cooling in the summer, Cole said.

Thies said there is a priority for elderly and residents with disabilities. All other eligible residents thereafter can submit applications to WECAC, providing they can prove their income.

Western Egyptian is set to launch the Percentage of Income Payment Program sometime this fall, which will help people eventually afford their bills, Thies said.

“Maybe they can’t afford to pay the whole amount, but if they can pay 60 percent with their income, the program will cover the rest,” she said.

Baucus outlines health plan without GOP support

David Espo
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — His calls for compromise rebuffed by Republicans, the Democratic chairman of the Senate Finance Committee unveiled sweeping legislation Wednesday to remake the nation's costly health care system largely along the lines outlined by President Barack Obama.

Sen. Max Baucus' proposal, months in the making, drew quick criticism from liberals who said his vision was too cramped and from Republicans who deemed it overly expansive. Yet whatever its fate, its mere release marked a critical turning point in Congress' long and tumultuous debate over Obama's top domestic priority.

The Finance Committee is to meet next week to vote on the plan, and after combining it with another panel's bill, Majority Leader Harry Reid intends to begin debate on the Senate floor late this month or early October. Across the Capitol, Speaker Nancy Pelosi has been waiting to see Baucus' health care prescription before advancing companion legislation toward a vote by the House.

"We cannot let this opportunity pass," Baucus, D-Mont., said as he outlined a $856 billion plan designed to protect millions who have unreliable insurance or no coverage at all, at the same time restraining the explosive growth of medical costs.

Congressional budget experts estimated the proposal would reduce the ranks of the uninsured by 29 million over a decade. They also predicted the plan would trim federal deficits by $49 billion over the same period and suggested savings in the range of hundreds of billions of dollars might result for the decade that follows.

Many of the bill's major provisions would be delayed until 2013, after the next presidential election.

But the impact of one of the key concessions Baucus made in a so-far-unsuccessful search for Republican support — allowing co-operatives, rather than the federal government, to sell insurance in competition with private industry — was judged harshly.

"They seem unlikely to establish a significant market presence in many areas of the country," wrote Douglas W. Elmendorf, head of the Congressional Budget Office.

Supporters claim the co-ops would compete effectively with private companies and help hold down the cost of insurance, but CBO's assessment is likely to re-energize advocates of direct government competition.

White House press secretary Robert Gibbs called the overall legislation an "important building block" that "gets us closer to comprehensive health care reform."

Reid, too, described it as "another important piece to the puzzle" on the road to health care legislation.

Pelosi said that while the bill would do less than House legislation to make coverage more affordable, its emergence "will move this historic debate forward."

Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, who has labored to keep his rank and file united in opposition, called it a partisan proposal that "cuts Medicare by nearly a half-trillion dollars and puts massive new tax burdens on families and small businesses, to create yet another thousand-page, trillion-dollar government program. Only in Washington would anyone think that makes sense, especially in this economy."

Baucus' legislation reflected nearly a year of preparation by the 67-year-old Montanan, a partially successful attempt to gain support from outside interest groups, and months of painstaking private negotiations with two other Democrats and three Republicans on the Finance Committee.

Karzai leading Afghan vote with 54 percent

Heidi Vogt
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KABUL — Afghan officials issued full preliminary results Wednesday showing President Hamid Karzai got 54.6 percent of the vote in last month's election, a result that could be annulled by mounting fraud allegations.

European Union election monitors say fraud is indicated in more than a quarter of the 5.6 million votes counted.

The Aug. 20 vote has been so tainted by reports of ballot-box stuffing and questionable tallies that many expect the final results to vary widely from the preliminary count after fraudulent ballots are thrown out.

If enough votes are thrown out for Karzai to drop below 50 percent, it will force him into a two-man runoff with top challenger Abdullah Abdullah, a former foreign minister who has 27.7 percent of the vote. The preliminary count gave Karzai 3.1 million votes to Abdullah's 1.6 million.

Recounts and investigations are likely to take weeks, pushing the date for any runoff well past the original plan for the first week of October. Snow starts blocking villages and roads in the mountainous country in November, so a long delay could make a second round logistically unfeasible until the spring.

The wait for a runoff could leave Afghanistan with a power vacuum at a time when Taliban attacks are increasing, and undermine support abroad for a war backing an apparently corrupt administration. Certified results originally were to have been released this week, with any runoff occurring two weeks later.

A spokesman said Abdullah would not comment on the release of the full results but would speak with reporters Thursday.

Waheed Omar, a spokesman for Karzai's campaign, said the president is "clearly leading in the elections and we have bypassed the 50 percent benchmark that is required for someone to win the first round. We hope that when the certified results are announced, we will win the election in the first round."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Ian Kelly stressed that the results were just preliminary.

"They're not final, and we're still waiting for the certified results," he said. "The certified results will only come after the independent electoral commission and the electoral complaints commission has carried out their investigations thoroughly, and done all the required audits and recounts."

"We welcome this next step in the process, but caution patience to everybody to await the final certified results," he said.

A U.N.-backed complaints commission is examining thousands of potentially fraudulent ballots. The commission, which is the final arbiter of the vote results, has ordered a massive audit and recount of about 10 percent of voting stations. The group has already invalidated ballots from 83 polling stations because of fraud allegations, all in areas with high support for Karzai.

EU observers said about 1.5 million of the 5.6 million ballots counted should have been held out because they have indications of fraud according to guidelines set out by election officials ahead of the vote — turnout at or above 100 percent, or more than 90 percent of votes cast for one candidate.

"All of these votes should have been quarantined and investigated," said Dimitra Ioannou, the group's deputy chief observer.

About 1.1 million of those votes were cast for Karzai. If all of them are taken out of the count, he would fall below the 50 percent mark.

Outside monitors have accused the Afghan election commission, which is run by Karzai appointees, of loosening its own fraud-identification measures part way through the counting.

ATLANTA (AP) — U.S. Rep. Joe Wilson's oldest son defended his father against a claim by former President Jimmy Carter that the congressman's outburst during a speech by President Barack Obama was "based on racism."

Responding to an audience question at a town hall at his presidential center in Atlanta, Carter said Tuesday that Wilson's outburst was also rooted in fears of a black president.

"I think it's based on racism," Carter said. "There is an inherent feeling among many in this country that an African-American should not be president."

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Barack Obama staged a homecoming-style Olympic rally at the White House Wednesday, saying the whole country is rooting for his hometown of Chicago in its efforts to host the 2016 Summer Games.

"Chicago is ready. The American people are ready. We want these games," he said.

"If you choose Chicago, I promise you this — Chicago will make America proud, and America will make the world proud," Obama added.

The International Olympic Committee will choose a host city during an Oct. 2 meeting.

THE SANITY CORNER

Capitalism in China

RACHEL THOMAS
rcthom88@gmail.com

Made in China is the mantra found on many items in the United States. On every clear cup there is a reminder of where we get most of our material goods. In this recession it is easy to want to take an easy way out, but what are the consequences here and abroad?

China, now and in the past, has tried to balance its economic growth with social stability. Companies in the U.S. and Europe have started to use China as the workplace of the world.

China has risen in the global marketplace in the past 10 years. It has been a lucrative place for the world, but at what cost?

The Chinese government does not have a widespread balance between its people and the companies encouraging its growth without worrying about long-term costs.

According to the CIA, in 2008 there were more than one billion people living in China. Out of this large population, unions and insurance may cover only a portion of it. Many go without benefits including job security, injury coverage and even pensions.

The parallels between the Industrial Revolution and the economic growth in China are eerily similar.

Workers in China have had to deal with long hours, few holidays and small wages. Areas of China have become specialized to a certain product such as textiles — similar to the Industrial Revolution.

This abuse not only affects the people of China, but also the environment. The coal mining industry takes its toll on the areas of the country through pollution and acid rain, caused by the sulfur that comes up through the mines.

It seems America has only given the Chinese people capitalism without any of the counter measures to balance it.

The attempts to improve the quality of life for workers in China have not been effective.

Double booking happens in some factories. A factory will have one set of papers given to a supplier that meet the requirements. Then there will be the actual papers from the factory, which will have the overtime on them.

The Declaration of Independence states, “We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.”

To ignore this in China, or any other country, means we have lost the heart of what made this country.

There is some hope. In the past year, workers have fought for their rights. Workers who were injured on the job have started to learn labor laws.

The one-child generation, from the one-child policy in China, has started companies with better conditions. Proof of this is the labor shortages in China over the summer.

China is planning for a solar plant that would help against the environmental damage it has already suffered. These changes are good and will eventually lead to a better China. The damages to China will add up without more changes, and there is no way to know exactly how it will pay for the large amount of industrial work that has been done in the country.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Education should be a guarantee

DEAR EDITOR:

In the wild, when subjected to trials, critters often times sacrifice their young that they may survive — instinct being the primary imperative.

Generally speaking, this type of insurance policy is frowned upon by civilized creatures. But today the state of Illinois faces such a trial.

That the legislature has opted out of aiding needy students next year through its MAP awards program is tantamount to nailing their futures to the cross in the name of expediency, thus literally rendering them the sacrificial lamb.

On the one hand, state health care is inordinately contributing to the drainage of public coffers faster than they can be refilled. On the other hand, by supporting education, we are insuring today’s students will aid in discovering solutions to social ills rather than supplementing them.

Our forefathers saw to it we were guaranteed certain inalienable rights, to which health care and education would seem part and parcel of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

I appreciate our public servants’ devotion to insuring these benefits, but our history of late reveals that during a fiscal crisis, education is unjustly sacrificed to keep entitlements afloat.

That is, we opt to sacrifice our youth. Why? Because theirs is not a prominent lobby such as AARP.

So as to alleviate any confusion as to the gist of my comments, let me make this perfectly clear: if it means bigger cuts in Medicare and Medicaid to insure our youth be well equipped to compete on the world’s stage, so be it.

Incidentally, I am in my 62nd year of learning.

LifeSavers coming to SIUC

DEAR EDITOR:

The week of Sept. 7 was National Suicide Prevention Week. Suicide is the second leading cause of death among college-age people.

Every two minutes, someone in the world commits suicide. Suicide is preventable, and you can help.

Thursday, Sept. 10, was World Suicide Prevention Day. On that day, nine communities across southern Illinois conducted simultaneous candlelight vigils at 8 p.m. to honor those who have died by suicide and to support those who grieve their loss.

In Carbondale, community members and SIU students, faculty and staff attended the vigil at the Town Square Fountain.

There are some students on campus who have learned how to prevent suicide. They were trained as LifeSavers back in high school. Many have asked for a LifeSavers chapter at SIUC.

Now is your chance. The Wellness Center plans to establish the first SIUC LifeSavers Chapter.

Today, all former LifeSavers and others interested are invited to attend the first LifeSavers planning meeting at 5 p.m. in Room 111 in the Student Health Center.

Any questions? Call Judy at 618-549-5578.

‘Energy’ strives to inspire

Chris McGregor
DAILY EGYPTIAN
CHRISM@SIU.EDU

This is Energy just wants everyone to follow their dreams. The St. Louis band’s message is an encouraging one, emphasizing the importance of staying positive in the pursuit of one’s goals. The band is scheduled to play at 7 p.m. Friday at the Pageant in St. Louis and will host a CD release show on Oct. 9, at FUBAR in St. Louis. “The band is about not being afraid to do what you love and encourage others to do the same,” said singer-guitarist Adam Gardner.

He said the band is following its dreams and wants to inspire others to pursue their own. “Every song is different, but the majority of our work basically is about believing in yourself. And who cares what someone else says? Do what makes you happy,” he said. The band said it takes great pride in its live performances and wants the audience to leave feeling inspired.

“When they leave one of our shows, we want them to take away something they have never had before,” drummer Britton Campbell said. “We want them to be inspired to go out and do something they want to do.” Campbell said he would consider his life a success if allowed to pursue his musical career unabated. “I spent a year and a half away from the dream I loved because I listened to what other people said. It only took a call from Adam with his new songs to get me back,” he said. Gardner and Campbell were in a band together called Loser’s Luck before forming This is Energy, deriving its new band’s name from the experience of its live performances, which Gardner said was “raw, natural energy throughout the music.” The band members said their musical inspiration comes mostly from solo artists such as Phil Collins and Sting. “Our music fits into the category of fun, because the main thing is we play music that is fun for us,” Campbell said. He said the band loves the music it plays, so joy is apparent in their live shows. “People these days are really in tune with music, and they can see what is real and what is not,” he said. “It is easy to tell when someone is doing something because they love it.” Gardner said the band wants to share its inspirational message. He said when a fan writes to tell the band its message reached them, “it is awesome.” For more information about This is Energy, go to www.thisisenergy.net.

"It's starting to garner more interest," she said. "We feel really good about it."

Twelve scholarships will be awarded annually to a dozen students within the program, she said. These scholarships will waive all SCC tuition and pay for books for the first two years.

Chancellor Sam Goldman said the dual enrollment process also allows those involved in the program to lock in their SIUC tuition rate the year they enroll at SCC, because of the state's tuition stabilization plan, Truth in Tuition, which requires a student's tuition to be locked for four years.

Goldman said in the State of the University address Monday that the partnership between the two schools relates directly to the commitments SIUC has set for itself.

"By establishing partnerships and embracing innovative approaches, we create new opportunities to serve more students," he said. "At the same time, we also underscore our commitments to accessibility, outreach and economic development."

Karen Sullivan, an instructor with the SIU Department of Aviation Technologies, explains pitch, yaw and roll, three concepts of aviation, to Brittany Frampton, a sophomore from Anna studying aviation at Shawnee Community College. Frampton is part of a group of aviation students taking advantage of an agreement between SIUC and Shawnee that allows students to simultaneously enroll in both schools.

"I think pride sometimes interferes with folks because people have lost jobs," he said. "People just don't know that we exist and that we want to help."

CHESI Board of Directors member Gordon Plumb, who also practices psychology in Carbondale, said the organization is still gaining the trust of low-income residents in the more middle-class Carbondale community.

"Many of the people who need health care services and who are poor and marginal are not aware of (CHESI)," Plumb said. "They're not aware that we can cover people, and they don't need to have a dime in their pocket."

The money to fund the Org-Sync program will come out of USG's reserve fund, which also funded $10,000 of the $16,000 that will be allocated to RSOs for the fall and spring semester.

Fabian said he was pleased with the advances the government took to pass the two motions.

"This is a step forward for our students and our campus," he said.

NBA Referee Association spokesman Larnell McMorris said in a recent statement he expects the league to lock out the referees over a new collective bargaining agreement on Oct. 1, which is the date for the first preseason game. Could the NBA use the lockout to get rid of bad referees?

@siu.edu

I hate this idea. The horrible refereeing in the league has created hours of enjoyment from the, "OMG! These guys are horrible" people. And who could forget all the great play the refereeing has given us, such as LeBron's and Kobe's patented 'six-steps-to-get-around-the-defenders move'. Keep these refs in; competent refs will only make the game about fundamentals and other nonsense.

I don't care if the lockout lasts 20 years, nothing is going to rid the NBA of bad officiating. I would say there are two things in this world you can count on: bad NBA officiating and Stan Van Gundy being confused for Ron Jeremy. It just isn't going to change. For me, that is what makes the NBA so fun to watch. I mean, some people actually believed LeBron had this crazy "crab dribble," and that is because the officials cannot be trusted.

I think it's a good idea because I've seen enough missed and blown calls by refs to make myself sick. There has got to be something done; there is no doubt in my mind that refs play favorites. There is no room on the court for patronage.

ENEMY

Southwest Baptist quarterback Steve Gachette said the team takes responsibility for the three losses.

"We've had a chance every game, but we really shoot ourselves in the foot," Gachette said. "We are going back to basics this week — focus on keeping it simple against Southern."

Gachette could be the lone hope for a Bearcat victory.

The junior has thrown for 1,065 yards in the three games with seven touchdowns in an offense averaging 490 yards per game. Four separate receivers have 12 catches; including Johnnie King, who has 307 yards receiving and three touchdowns in as many games.

Gachette is also the team's leading rusher, averaging 58.3 yards per game on the ground.

"Ever since Gachette started his freshman year, we know that he could be a special type of player," Allen said. "He's the type of player that constantly works hard and wants to be the best player."

Regardless of Saturday's outcome, Gachette said the team is excited to play in a Football Championship Subdivision atmosphere.

"It's bigger than any place that we have ever played before," Gachette said. "We can't wait to see the excitement and the crowd. It's a lot bigger than our home stadium."

Although he was the special teams coach for San Jose State when it played at Ohio State, Allen said the larger atmosphere would still come as a welcome surprise.

"To play in a big stadium with a big crowd, it will mean a lot for our players," Allen said. "The sense I get from practice is that they cannot wait to get into Carbondale and play the Salukis in that atmosphere."

Kickoff is scheduled for 6 p.m. Saturday at McAndrew Stadium.

MARTINEZ

Martinez will face off against Keith Jones in the 135-pound weight class at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Kage One event in Metropolis. Martinez said he hopes the experience will give him more insight into the psychology of a fighter.

"I want to see what it is that goes through a fighter's mind. Does a fighter fight to feel strong, for the desire of power, or something else?" he said.

Martinez said he wants to experience what triggers the isolated moments of compassion and intimacy he has witnessed in fights.

"When I say intimate ... (I mean) highly emotional," Martinez said. "What's more intimate than two bodies attempting to overcome one another? There's this mutual sense of vulnerability between both fighters when their bodies and minds are put at stake in front of numerous people, and especially loved ones."

He said some examples of compassion he has seen in past contests include fighters touching gloves, helping each other at the end of a round and embracing each other after the fight.

"This is a high contact and highly violent sport, but that doesn't mean I have negative feelings towards my opponent," he said.

Martinez has done more than just shoot pictures to prepare for the fight.

He has been training with Dojo USA instructor Tim Fickes at Sports Blast for about one year. Fickes, who also promotes Kage One, said Martinez is in good shape and prepared for the fight.

"When a fighter is walking to the cage, that is when the reality of the situation sinks in and when you learn a lot about a fighter," Fickes said. "I've seen some really good athletes begin to fall apart at the first sign of failure, while others show abilities you would never expect out of them."

Martinez said he has focused his training on Kempo ju-jitsu — a style of submission fighting — but has also spent time learning general mixed martial arts striking and grappling techniques.

Fickes said Martinez has all the tools to succeed and it would be up to him to use them at the right moments to get the victory.

Martinez said he wants to maintain a scientific approach throughout the fight, but would be prepared to abandon his analytical view.

“There's this mutual sense of vulnerability between both fighters when their bodies and minds are put at stake in front of numerous people, and especially loved ones.”

— Antonio Martinez
cinema and photography assistant professor

"This is still a fight, and my wife has warned me that my opponent might be intent on doing harm and (be) extremely violent," he said. "In that case, I may be forced to place my philosophical ideas to the side."

If he loses Saturday, Martinez said he would fight again to gain more understanding of what it takes for a fighter to come back and overcome the fear of defeat. Regardless of the outcome, Martinez said the experience would only increase his knowledge of the sport.

EYE ON THE ENEMY

Bearcats focus on basics

JAMES McDONNOUGH | DAILY EGYPTIAN

Sophomore defensive end Chance Coda runs a drill with the Saluki defense at practice Wednesday. Inside linebacker coach Tom Dosch said the main focus of the SIU defense for Saturday's game will be stopping Southwest Baptists University's quarterback Steve Gachette. Gachette broke Southwest Baptists' record for yards in a game with 573 yards Saturday in a triple overtime loss to Harding University in Searcy, Ark.

A week after committing nine turnovers, the Southwest Baptist Bearcats know fundamentals will be key in their upset bid against the Salukis.

The Bearcats have turned the ball over 12 times in their previous two games, including nine turnovers last Saturday in a 49-41 triple-overtime loss against Harding. Head coach Keith Allen said the Bearcats would not have a chance at winning in Carbondale Saturday if the trend continued.

"We have been cleaning up a lot of things in practice so far. We know that we cannot play like we did against (Harding) and expect to compete against (SIU head coach Dale) Lennon's Salukis in Carbondale."

The entire season has been a collection of missed opportunities for the Bearcats (0-3), who are an independent team affiliated with NCAA Division II. Despite three losses, the Bearcats have either held the lead or been tied late in the third quarter in all their games this season, including matchups with University of Central Missouri and Northwest Missouri State, who are ranked No. 12 and No. 6 in the Division II Coaches' Poll.

Lennon said the way the Bearcats competed with the upper-echelon teams in Division II shows they are not a team to take lightly.

"Division II is pretty good football. A few plays here and there — their record could be different. This team is capable of giving you some fears," Lennon said. "You have to give them respect."

WOMEN'S GOLF

Young squad finishes third

Inexperience could not stop the SIU women's golf team in its first tournament of the season.

The Salukis finished third at the Towson Classic in St. Michael's, Md., — the first collegiate competition for two of the five golfers.

Head coach Diane Daugherty said the team finished strong and played aggressive despite its youth.

"They didn't play like a young team in this tournament. They went out and they took care of business," Daugherty said.

The Salukis started the final round in second place with a score of 313, but couldn't hold off Longwood University's (614) final round of 299, as SIU ended the tournament with a team total of 626.

Yale won the tournament with a team total of 590. Fairleigh Dickinson (631) and host Towson University (641) rounded out the top-five.

Sophomore golfer Alisha Matthews shot a tournament-low for the Salukis with a final individual score of 151, which placed her sixth overall in individual play.

"It always feels good to have the lowest score on the team, but I know I can do better," Matthews said.

Freshman Shaina Rennegarbe and Jenna Dombroski both made impressive debuts for the Salukis. Rennegarbe finished tied for ninth place with a final score of 155 and Dombroski placed 11th with a score of 157.

Coach Daugherty said she was impressed by Rennegarbe's ability to fight back after having a tough first nine holes and saw a lot of potential in the freshman.

"She fought back from a 43 in the front nine to only a 35 on the back nine and that really shows the kind of character she has," Daugherty said. "(Dombroski) is a really talented golfer and she was good in high school, but I think in this tournament she realized how good she really is."

Sophomore Meg Gilley (163) and junior Alex Anderson (165) rounded out the five Salukis who played the tournament.

The women's golf team plays next at the Payne Stewart Memorial in Springfield, Mo., Monday.

Dombroski said Springfield's larger greens could help the team's shots.

"I think the big greens will be to our advantage as long as we can minimize leaving shots out on the course," she said.

MIXED MARTIAL ARTS

On the surface, mixed martial arts is full of thunderous knockouts and body bending submissions.

But Antonio Martinez, an assistant professor in the department of Cinema and Photography, said a closer examination reveals many intimate and compassionate moments.

Martinez has photographed and researched the sport for more than two years and has had exhibits of his images in Chicago and Strasbourg, France. He will take his research to the next level Saturday when he steps out from behind the camera and into the cage for his first fight.
